Working with the Heart Tuner

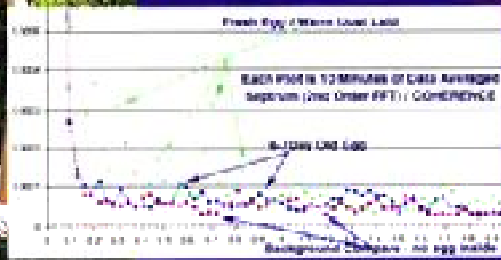

A student working at the Imaging Lab has set up one of the first structured research plans using the HeartTuner. The goal of the study is to investigate how mental occupation and conscious activity affect the second order Fourier transform of the electrocardiogram. This is called the Cepstrum, and is hypothesized to be a measure of coherence. To see how tasks affect coherence, subjects are consecutively asked to carry out three different tasks: a set of easy math problems, a set of difficult math problems with time pressure, and a relaxation task where subjects are only invited to sit back and look at peaceful landscape photographs. He uses the new export function of the HeartTuner to import data into Microsoft Excel, with which he processes it. Although the protocol is still being adapted, the results of the pilot study carried out in Hiversum are already promising: subjects appear to have significantly higher amplitudes in their Cepstrum plot when carrying out difficult, frustrating tasks (2nd. Figure). Furthermore, there is also a clear correlation between the task and the x-coordinate of the highest peak in the Cepstrum: higher intensity tasks are marked by lower values (Figure 1).

Right: Cepstrum peak amplitudes - higher during difficult, frustrating tasks. - Top Plot - AVERAGE of Subject Pool for Cepstrum (Coherence?) Peak - Vertical Axis - Power Density - Horizontal Axis - Time During Which Tasks were uniformly sequenced. 2nd. Figure: Cepstrum Peak x-coordinate (Emotional Index) is lower during difficult tasks and higher during relaxation. What exactly does the Emotional Index tell us about our state of mind?

The screenshot shows the HeartTuner software interface with several data plots and a prominent banner that reads "FREE DOWNLOAD AT WWW.HEARTCOHERENCE.COM/MODULE". The interface includes various windows for data analysis and visualization.

NEW: HeartTuner HARMONIC MODULE Software (beta) just released! Hundreds of interest groups around the world have dreamed together for many years of day when it would be possible to measure and teach with feedback - LINK HEARTS AROUND THE WORLD. A very spiritually based and planet healing vision of this plan has been called 'The Harmonic Module' (from Planet Heartworks) - <http://www.soulinvitation.com/module>. In addition - this capability to link hearts into phase lock and measured coherence TOGETHER, serves many immediate practical and business functions - CORPORATE CONSENSUS PROCESSES, CONFLICT RESOLUTION, (see especially the Science of Peace University group <http://www.scienceofpeace.org>), GROUP MEDITATION, HEALING and PRAYER, etc. The brand new HARMONIC MODULE software for HeartTuner Links 2 to 1000 more hearts (or even brain harmonics) over computer Internet or Intranet connection. (1 HeartTuner and computer required for each 2 people). Corporate boardroom - AND the warring military may never be the same, now sincerely to link hearts is measurable and teachable!
